On the 1st of June, 1867, she was ready to proceed to this port, everything being complete, except the fitting-out and furnishing, which have been progressing actively ever since her arrival. The cost of the hull and machinery was $150,000, and of the fitting-out about $4,000; so that her entire cost has been nearly $200,000. But in return for this large outlay, the Company is now able to boast of the possession of one of the handsomest, and, perhaps the fastest, steamship that ever left perhaps, the fastest, steamship that ever left this port.

The stem is of bar iron, 7 inches by 3½, diminishing above the water line to 6 inches by 3.

The material of the stern post is of the same size and character as that of the keel. The frames of the hull are of angle iron, 4½ by 3½ inches. Half the vessel's length, amidsnips, is provided with additional frames, fitted across the keel, at opposite sides of each floor plate,

A Marvellore Change in Color Supperint Reflected — Yesterday an occurrence took place in the vicinity of Girard avenue and Mariborough areets, which affords an instance of the wonderful change in appearance of the countenance under trying of cummtances. It has been a subject of universal publicity that the hair on the head of certain individuals will in a moment of great terror assume a hoary aspect, but an instance of where the dark hue of the skin ever changed to the other extreme was only made public yesterday.

It seems that on the corner of the streets above meutioned there is a flour store, before which a number of malicious young men were wont to congregate. And when lacking anything else to do, would transfer handsful of flour from a neighboring barrel to every passing darkey's face, with force and effect altogether unpleasant. A colored man of unusual blackness passed there yesterday, and by this same operation, practised by Eugene Patrick, assumed a weird aspect with flour in his eyes, and up his nose, and in his ears, causing specings innumerable and swearing to correspond. An officer near by arrested Patrick, who, appearing before Alderman Clouds, was held in $500 ball to answer at Court.

IN RESPONSE to general inquiry, we would state that the Washington Library, organized in aid of the Riverside Institute, for the gratultous education of orphans of deceased soldiers and sailors, have opened their office at No. 1225 Chesnut street. The beautiful fine steel-plate engravings to be given to those who purchase stock are on exhibition. Stockholders, besides receiving an engraving at considerably less than the retail price, will also participate in the grand distribution of presents to take place hereafter, as announced in another column. A gift is insured to every one, there being no exceptions whatever. The Company are enabled to act thus liberally from the fact that, making their purchases of engravings and of the presents to be given away in such enormously argequantities, the cost per single article is, of course, greatly reduced. Besides this, all of the presents, such as the real estate, have been handed over to the Company by the o.iginal owners at their lowest market value. On this account are the Company enabled to offer such great inducements to those who would interest themselves and aid in alleviating the miseries and distresses of the hundreds and thousands of poor and forsaken orphans who are now daily seen in the lanes and thoroughfares of our large cities. ECONOMY IS WEALTH .-Fine French Black Suits...... Extra do. do. do. Fine Mixed Spring Overcoats... The shove prices will convince that we are determined to close out our immense stocks of fine Clothing at an astounding sacrifice.

FEARFUL ACCIDENT AT THE NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

LITTLE "ALL RIGHT" PALLS ALMOST FROM THE DOME TO THE PIT OF THE HOUSE. The Academy of Music was crowded to overflowing last evening with a brilliant audience, a great portion of which was composed of ladies. The first part of the regular performance passed off amid enthusiasm, and about 10 o'clock the gamboling pranks of little "All Right" on the tubs, the ladder, and the trapaze had been witnessed with awe and wonderment by the congregated hundreds. The closing scene of the night's entertainment was as usual begun by the rapid flight of the little favorite up the pulleyed rapid flight of the little favorite up the pulleyed rope to the dome of the proseenium, where for a moment he hung by one hand to the apparently frail cord support above his head, and then with whizzing noise, the pulley attached to the strap from which the youngster dangled, started on its fearful journey down the tightened rope that is stretched for the purpose from the dome to the middle box of the dress circle. As the first creak of the miniature wheel was the first creak of the miniature wheel was heard, a death-like stillness prevailed throughout the vast auditorium. A second creak, and, with the speed of lightning the body of the young performer shot down the rope and reached the middle of the downward course, when, to the horror of the thousands who were gazing upon the awful movement, one of the cords attached to the dress circle sixings to brace the main rope gave way. The latter, relaxing its rigidity by the sudden outlet, fell a few feet its rigidity by the sudden outlet, fell a few feet downward, and then shot upward with a twang, like the snapping of an arrow-string, and the little performer was flung from his hold high into air, and in an instant was dashed through space full fifty feet to the floor in the middle ausle below. It would be useless to attempt to picture the scene that ensued. The acreeches of the terrified women ran fearfully piercing through the halls, while the men, with cheeks blanched to the whiteness of a corpse sat as if blanched to the whiteness of a corpse, sat as if frozen to their seats with terror. Several of the ladies fell swooning in their boxes, and were carried out into the ante-rooms. In a second, when partly relieved from its trance, the audience jumped to their feet, and a rush was made to-wards where the body of "All Right" lay as if dead. In the midst of the confusion the Japanese performers on the stage, who themselves at first seemed to have lost all their presence of mind at the unexpected catastrophe, jumped into the orchestra, over the railing, and were at the side of the boy in the twinkling of an eye, Restoratives were applied, but the suffereer lay bleeding and still unconscious. Dr. George and the little fellow, as if still before the audience, siriving to please by speaking the only English sentence he knew, raised his head ever so little and softly murmured "All right." The The effect of this enunciation on those present can better be imagined than described. Up to midnight the doctors were in faithful attendance upon the sufferer, and at that time were surprised that he had received no lajury that would prove fatal. In his fall the right side of his head was tearfully crushed; both his ankles were very badly sprained, his right side and his peivis were also seriously injured. The physicians believe, however, that notwith-standing the injuries he has sustained, that if there be no internal hurt, of which at midnight there was no sign, he will recover in a time from the effects of his fearful fall. pronounce his escape from instant death as almost miraculous. Not a bone of the child's body was broken.
